

Decadent Fudge Brownies

Epicurious | 1998

by Marcy Goldman

A Treasury of Jewish Holiday Baking

Just wonderful even when it is not Passover—fudgy, dense, delicious. Another "most requested" recipe.

Yield: Makes 30 squares

ingredients

- 2 cups granulated or brown sugar
- 1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter or unsalted Passover margarine, melted and cooled
- 3 eggs or 3/4 cup egg beaters
- 1 tablespoon brewed coffee
- 3/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder, sifted 64 grams
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 scant cup matzoh cake meal
- 1/2 cup finely chopped toasted walnuts (optional)

preparation

Preheat the oven to 350°F. Lightly grease a 7 by 10-inch rectangular baking pan, a 9-inch square pan, or an 8- or 9-inch springform pan.

In a bowl, mix the sugar into the melted butter, then the eggs, whisk coffee, cocoa, salt, cake meal, and toasted walnuts, if using. whisk vanilla fold w/ silicone spatula add chips

Spoon the batter into the prepared pan and bake for about 25 minutes. ✓ thick batter Do not overbake. The brownies should be set and seem dry to the touch, but there should not be a crust around the sides. Cool in the pan. Cut into squares or (if baked in a round pan) into wedges.

Source Information

Reprinted with permission from Treasury of Jewish Holiday Baking by Marcy Goldman. © 2009 Whitecap Books, Ltd.

notes

1 tsp vanilla, 1/2 cup dark choc chips, 1 cup white and 1 cup brown sugar.

Epicurious.com © Condé Nast Digital, Inc. All rights reserved.