

Shanghai Fried Noodles (Cu Chao Mian)

Our authentic take on a popular Chinese dish. This recipe is so simple to make, and it will be on the table within 15-20 minutes!

4.71 from 24 votes

Prep Time
10 mins

Cook Time
10 mins

Total Time
20 mins

Course: Noodles and Pasta Cuisine: Chinese Servings: 4
Calories: 579kcal Author: Judy

Ingredients

For the pork & marinade (omit if you want the dish to be vegetarian):

- 6 oz. lean pork (170g, sliced into ~~1/4"~~ strips)
- 3/4 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1/2 teaspoon light soy sauce
- 1/8 teaspoon dark soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon shaoxing wine
- 1/8 teaspoon sugar

firm tofu, drained, (small) cubed

For the rest of the dish:

- 3 tablespoons oil (divided)
- 8 shiitake mushrooms (fresh or dry; you have to soak them first if they're dried, thinly sliced)
- 1 pound Japanese-style udon noodles (450g)
- 2 1/2 teaspoons dark soy sauce
- 2 1/2 teaspoons soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1 bunch choy sum or baby bok choy (washed and trimmed)

Instructions

1. Mix together the pork and marinade ingredients and set aside for 5-10 minutes while you prepare the other ingredients.
2. Heat a tablespoon of oil in a wok over high heat. Add the pork stir-fry until browned. Turn down the heat, remove the pork from the wok and set aside. Add a couple more tablespoons of oil to the wok and sautee the mushrooms for about 2 minutes using medium heat. Break up the noodles gently with your hands and add them to the wok.
3. Add the soy sauces and sugar. Stir-fry everything together until the noodles get an even, deep brown color. If you're not seeing the color you want, add a little more dark soy sauce.
4. Add the leafy greens now and mix in with the noodles until wilted. Serve hot! Some people like to add a few drops of Chinese black vinegar right before eating—totally up to you.

Nutrition

Calories: 579kcal | Carbohydrates: 88g | Protein: 25g | Fat: 13g | Saturated Fat: 1g | Cholesterol: 28mg | Sodium: 958mg | Potassium: 255mg | Fiber: 5g | Sugar: 2g | Vitamin A: 5000IU | Vitamin C: 63.5mg | Calcium: 118mg | Iron: 1.5mg